The Super Friday Themes

By Lauren Malster

The Daily Double chose Disney and Halloween, which I think are quiet odd. It is August and we're already thinking about Halloween? I can understand why we would want to write about Disney because they have made some of my favorite movies like Peter Pan, and all the classics. So thanks for reading my article. Do you think that Halloween is weird in August. Bye. I am going to hang with Gabbi, Box, and Gavin. TODDLES.

Facebook

By Rosa Ruiz

Everyone knows about Facebook; now the thing is how someone could not know about Facebook? Now I log on to my facebook everyone's like omg "You have a Facebook." God yes get over it. Now if you don't know what facebook is well then facebook is a website that 750 million people go on to connect with friends and to have fun, by playing games such as Cityville, Farmville, chat and more than just that. Now, everyone knows about the movie that they made about Facebook, The Social Network. Well, if you don't, let me refresh your memory. The movie The Social Network is about the founding of Facebook, how it was created, and more.

Facebook was originally for college students who went to Harvard, Stanford University, and other colleges in the Ivy League and in the Boston area. The people who made Facebook were Mark Zuckerberg, Eduardo Saverin, Dustin Moskovitz, and Chris Hughes. 138.9 million people from the U.S. use Facebook monthly. As of April 2010, 41.6% of people in the U.S. were on Facebook, according to Social Media Today.

Facebook is worth 13.5 billion dollars. I would never buy Facebook, 'cause then I would be broke. But you would have to a company to buy Facebook. The main thing is that so many people have a Facebook. By the end of the year, half of the U.S. will have a facebook. Everyone in my house have a facebook except my mom, but she will, TRUST ME. However, Facebook lost 7 million users in the U.S. and Canada in May 2011. How do people find out about Facebook? Well, their friends tell them, then they go on the website and get a profile, then they connect with friends and, it just keeps going on from there.

Everyone tells people, friends and more about how wonderful Facebook is, how it reminds you about your friend's birthday, and how if you want someone's attention that you poke them... well that is all true. I have 60 something friends and I don't know their birthday, except my brother's and dad's. According to a complete.com study, Facebook was the most used social network site around the world. Entertainment weekly stated: "How on earth did we stalk our exes, remember our co-workers' birthdays, bug our friends before Facebook?" So many people love Facebook. To tell you truth, I like it too.

Facebook got big the second it went up... how? Who knows. Facebook became famous in 2004 in the summer. The company changed its name from "the Facebook" to just "Facebook." How they did it ...I do not know.

On October 24, 2007, a 1.6% share of Facebook was worth $240 million. Facebook was then worth a total of $15 billion. Most of Facebook's ads come from Microsoft, and that is how Facebook makes most of its money. Before Microsoft, Facebook wasn't making any money. September 2009 was the first time Facebook began making money. Facebook's value was $41 billion in November 2010 (slightly higher than eBay) and the only U.S. online companies larger than it were Google and Amazon. Facebook has gone from small to the biggest so many people care and have the most fun on facebook, so do I.

Moon cheese!!!!

Some people say the moon is made of cheese. This, my reader is true. You may say "but how do they get the moon rocks?" well that is because there is a pit full of what you call 'moon rocks' but they are actually alien cribs. There are staircase-like crevices that you can walk on to get there.

Because we stole the aliens cribs they will invade earth to get them back at whatever it takes. Even destroy the planet!!!!!! Oh, by the way this article is by Christine Foster.

Halloween

By Lily Biro

Halloween is usually scary because there's a hill somewhere that you have to walk down. And there's scary stuff all over it. And it's always dark. Sometimes, the people who give you candy are dressed up in scary things, or they might even chase after you! For example, there was one house where there was a gorilla and when you got candy, the gorilla chases after you. At my house, I get a lot of candy there, then I have to donate some of it. At one house, since I was little, there were only little candy bars and three big candy bars left, and there were three big kids behind me, and sadly, she gave the three big candy bars to the three big kids ☹. Last year, my sister and I dressed up as a devil and an angel. I was the devil, and she was the angel. This year I want to be a vampire! I love Halloween!!

Think Improv

By Ahzeem Santos

In advanced improv there is a lot of noise but noise is the least you'd expect from a big large fun class like improv! If you walked in the room you would notice that the improv class was doing some very energetic stuff. The kids were saying stuff that was just plain silly but at the same time it was funny.

The game the class was playing involved people shouting out random places and whatever one the counselor thought was cool he chose and that would be the place they were at for just that scene. The counselor of the class, Owen Scott was dealing out slips to the kids in the class. The kids were supposed to read the script as a line at any random moment. The funny part about it is that when the kids that were acting chose to pull out the slip when they said the line it made no sense. But once the scene was over the setting would change.

These are some things the class talked about: bananas, airports, but with both of these topics two people had to make a scene only improvising what was going on then that's when the slips would come out. When the plane topic came up the scene was two girls on a plane to Africa when they realized that they didn't get their shots so they left the airport and tried getting their shots but the hospital was closed so then the slips got pulled out the line was "the names bond, James bond" and they had to make sense of that line into the scene. But unfortunately the doctors who were closed didn't let them in anyway because they thought that James bond was real and they never made it to Africa.

I had a very good time observing the advanced improv class! If you're thinking about taking any improv classes don't hold back on it the classes seem very fun!

This article contains 2 great quotes about endings and beginnings in honor of the end of camp this year.

"The more things seem to change, the more they stay the same...don't you think it's strange?" -Corinne Bailey Rae

"Every finish line is the beginning of a new race." -Lil' Wayne

Remember these when you feel bad about the session ending. There's always next year, and hopefully the rest of the year will be a BLAST.

Love you all and can't believe this may be the last time you'll ever read my writing. (although if you come back it definitely won't be!)

Advanced Improv: Fly on the wall

By Loreal Williams

As you walk into the Middle Building drama room you hear laughing kids, jokes being told, and games being played. All of the campers were standing in a line against the wall. The energy level seemed to go up as the class went on. One by one they each came up to the center of the room and told a joke. As we observed them, we found out they were playing a game where they had to involve an animal and a number. As we observed more, we noticed that Holly and her "Poetry in Motion" class was there too. The "Poetry in Motion" campers were much younger than the rest of the group. They seemed excited because of the different background. There were many different energy levels in the room. Many seemed very happy and excited that they had an audience. Owen Scott, the teacher of the class, is encouraging them to make good jokes. When they did, he was very excited. He offered advice to the campers about their jokes. He was also very encouraging to the campers no matter what. As they were playing the first game, they had to make one more joke to play a different game. When they made up that joke, they got to play a game called "Celebrity". "Celebrity" is an improv game. I'm not sure what the rules quite were, but they were given a scene by the teacher or one of the campers and they each had three pieces of paper that had random lines and phrases written on them. They had to use those sentences in the scene. They seemed very excited to play this game. The game seemed really fun but a little bit difficult for someone who hasn't done improv before. It was fun to observe the class and they seemed definitely advanced at improv!

*Halloween

By Sophie Biro

My family sort of thinks that Halloween is a fake holiday, but we still celebrate it. One of my favorite Halloween costumes was when I was an angel. I wore a white dress with two skirts and tights so I didn't get cold. My favorite house I ever went to was a house where they had big bags of candy. Well, they were actually little bags... The scariest house I ever went to was one where a gorilla chased you after you got your candy. When I was little I wore a hat! Next was a witch when I was 5 and 6. The end!
